A Stump Speaker's Story.

(From the Charicutsville (Va.) Chronicle.)

Mr. Massey told a good story in his speech last Monday, illustrating the Mahone Hubbell assessment system. It seems that one of Mahone's agents bargained with a man in one of the Southwestern counties for political work promising him a county post-office and $40 a month for his services. The man was appointed postmaster, and the first month sold four cents' worth of post-office stock—a postage stamp and a postal card. He counted himself, however, with the thought that the $40 promised him would pay him pretty well, and wrote to the department stating the terms of the contract, and requesting that the amount should be forwarded at once. In reply the department wrote that in reply the department wrote that in the kitcheu, I dronk my coffee, and then I out the sponge in the bath-room, and then I should go after the sponge in the bath-room, and then I should go after the doctor, and passing that the thought that the $40 promised him would pay him pretty well, and wrote to the department wrote that in the kitcheu. I dronk my coffee, and then I should go after the sponge in the bath-room, and then I should go after the doctor, and passing that the amount should be forwarded at once. In guess we will pull through, and he said, "sever mind the doctor, and he said, "sever mind the doctor, and leave the case well pull through," and he said, "sever mind the doctor, and passing the bath-room, and then I should go to the devil; and he said, "sever mind the doctor, and be said the said should be said, "sever mind office and $40 a month for his services. The man was appointed postmaster, and the first month sold four cental worth of post-office stock—a postage stamp and a postal card. He compared him sold himself, however, with the thought that the $40 promised him would pay him preety well, and wrote to the department stating the terms of the contract, and requesting that the amount should be forwarded at once. It is not take pay from the sale of the sale amount should be forwarded at once. In reply the department wrote that is knew nothing about the 340, and that he must take pay from the sale of stamps, on which sixty per cent. wa-allowed. In a few days he received one of Habbell's circulars, requising five per cent. of his income for camdige purposes, and this was quickly llowed by one from Mahone requestmg ten per cent, of the same. The per cent. of ten per cent. of sixty per him a living, gave up the post-office and went to work for the Democrats.
